Subject: RE: 26/0593 Castle Farm

Hi Vicky

Whilst I would agree that views from the asset are to the south and east (where the land falls away) are significant ones, there are also long-held historic associations with the adjacent farmstead to the west; still called 'Castle Farm' today.

However, from the information provided, I would conclude that proposed extensions to the extant modern agricultural building are sufficiently distant from the scheduled asset, with views of the proposed sufficiently interrupted by existing development, so as not to impact upon the way in which the scheduled monument is experienced, understood, or appreciated.

Many thanks,

Guy Arnall
